How To Approach and Pick-Up Russian Women

Tips For Western Men

With the advent of the Internet, a whole new world opened up for those seeking love. Now, we have not only night clubs and singles groups in our home towns, we have the wide, wide, world to search for our one true love where we can meet, fall in love and finally marry and live happily ever after.

A lot of men have used the Internet for meeting Russian women who are known for the grace, charm and beauty and every year, thousands of men travel to Russia to meet these famed beauties. Preparing to travel to Russia is not a trip to the local park. It takes a lot of time and preparation not to mention the expense of airline tickets, accommodations and other costs. With that in mind, one of the biggest fears most men have is "What if I don't like her or she doesn't like me." So, what are you going to do if you get to Russia and unfortunately, the woman you had planned to meet is not that "right" someone? Not the woman you had imagined? Do you have a fall back plan or are all your efforts going to go to waste?

Gentlemen, if should ever get caught in this situation, don't despair! I have an idea for you and it is as old as time and works like the ticking of a fine watch. Once you have arrived in Russia and discovered the woman you were to meet is not compatible, use your God given instincts and do what men have done for thousands of years - approach and pick up Russian girls on your own.

I know that sometimes western men feel uncomfortable approaching women in public places because in their countries many women don't appreciate being approached by a stranger and this can sometimes cause problems. But in Russia it is a very different situation. Many Russians still meet each other by accident, whether it be on the public transportation system, on the street, at a movie theater or in any of the busy little shops.

Russian women appreciate getting compliments from men and don't see anything strange or unusual if these compliments are given by complete strangers. In fact, compliments from men make a Russian woman's day. They are romantics and still believe in fairy tales.

The world being in the state that it is, I know it is hard to believe but even today, many young Russian girls and even adult women leave their homes in the morning with hope of meeting their "one and only" even if it is by accident. So, why not use this approach while you are in Russia?

Western men who understand the potential of a chance encounter in Russia just plan their trip, buy a ticket and fly to Russia to find their soulmate the old fashion way and guess what? Their chances of being successful are very huge!

Men who have used this "tried and trued" method of meeting women have the opposite "problem" of meeting Russian women. Instead of being ignored or admonished for being approached, women have openly encouraged such attention that men have become spoiled and find choosing that "one special woman," difficult.

I am sure that every man has his own idea about approaching and picking up women. In theory it may seem a little bit awkward but if you see the woman of your dreams, then your heart often times leads the way to approach her without anyone's advice.

But, just in case you are a little rusty and need a gentle push in the right direction, I have written this report offering you some methods that work in Russia. Use your imagination to fit the situation and make them work for you.

To start off, approaching a Russian woman will be a lot easier for you than for a Russian man. Why? Because you are a foreigner and Russians are intrigued with foreigners and will be very polite and friendly.

What about the language barrier, you may ask. Don't worry about this as almost all Russians learn English in school and a large percentage of them can get by in a simple conversation. When these women get older, they tend to lose their English language skills but I doubt that you want to pick up a Babushka (grandmother) on the Russian streets.

Any place can be the right place to pick up Russian women, so let's begin:

BEACHES

If you travel in summer, then you can find a lot of beautiful women on the beaches. Russian summers are very short and everybody trying to use this short period of time to lie on the beach and get a summer tan.

Beaches are a great meeting place for people, young and old and can turn into a dating paradise for people. Many of my Russian friends found their future husband on the beach. One of my friends, who lives here in California, met her American husband on the beach during his visit to Russia.

Stroll along the beach until you see some one of interest and situate yourself on the sand close by. Make eye contact, smile and state your name, and ask her name. The fact that you will be speaking in English will be a door opener in itself. Usually, this simple trick is enough for a beginning conversation. Another, but more bold method, would be to bring her a cold drink. It is very hot on the beach. The rest depends on you.

ON THE STREETS

For a person in a strange city, just standing on the sidewalk in any city can be an easy way to meet a woman. All you need to do is tell any woman you are “lost”, you need directions, etc; You can even keep a map in your hand, obviously showing that you have lost your way. By the way, you will lose your way very often, so you won't be lying.

Once you get the directions you might say something like:

“Thank you so much but I am afraid that anyway it will be very difficult to find this on my own. Do you have time to walk with me and show me the way?” If girl doesn't agree, then just give her your card with your name and the hotel phone number and ask her to call if she might have the time to show the city to you. Or, just ask for her phone number and an opportunity to see her again.

SMALL FOOD SHOPS

This time you are again “lost”, but the direction you need is in choosing food stuffs. Breads, pastries, canned goods almost anything can be questioned.

Just ask any of pretty patrons “What is better? This or that product?” You can ask what she likes better and then give her a compliment: “I think I can trust a taste of a such beautiful girl.” Again, opportunity knocks and you can lead the rest of conversation based on her reaction. In most cases you will get a favorable reaction.

FLOWER POWER

As in most European cities, Russian cities are no different and you can find many street vendors who sell flowers. Most of these vendors are located on the busy streets filled mostly with women.

As with flower vendors, many Russian cities have open cafe's where you can sit and enjoy coffee. The combination of the two is an open invitation for finding a pretty woman. Let's say you are sipping coffee at one of these street cafes and a woman you find interesting is seated near you. This is a great opportunity to go to the flower vendor and purchase a single flower and return to the young lady's table and offer a token "A beautiful flower for a beautiful lady." Most likely she will be pleasantly surprised and the fact that you are a foreigner doesn't hurt the situation at all!

If she appears shy or reserved about the situation, make you compliment and offer her your card with your name and phone information of where you are staying and invite her to give you a call.

Russian women adore flowers and as most TV commercials say "A flower says it all!"

GIFT SHOPS

You will be in shock how many stunning Russian women you are going to see in Russia. They will be everywhere! So, don't be surprised if you meet an attractive woman who will be selling the morning newspaper or some little souvenir in the kiosks.

If she is working it doesn't mean you cannot try to pick up her. Smile at her when you buy something. Make her remember you, after perhaps five to ten minutes return to her with a flower or a candy bar in your hands. Thank her for the service, then present the item to her with your card and phone number, all the while complimenting her. At the same time ask her when she gets off from work, ask for her phone number or ask for her to call you. One major caveat, be sure to look at her right hand (Russians wear their wedding ring on the right hand), before you make any overtures. Russian women are proud of their marital status and almost always wear a wedding ring. Just remember that If a woman hasn't a wedding ring, it almost a 100% possibility that she isn't married. If you see a wedding ring on the left hand, it is mean that woman is divorced and want to show this in a demonstrative way. In other words she is most likely available.

SCHOOLS OF HIGHER LEARNING

Universities can be a great place to meet unmarried young women. For example, say you are interested in a woman who wants to be a doctor. Go to the nearest medical school and look around. If you find someone interesting, be prepared to make up a story such as you are doing a little research for a friend who is thinking of attending a medical school in Russia and you are there to pick up brochures and information or, perhaps you have interests in attending this school yourself because of some great program they have. What ever your cover story is, make it plausible.

There are women all over the campus and all you need is a sharp eye to find a woman that interests you. Approach the woman you have chosen and speak with her in English. This will immediately get the woman's attention (the fact that you are speaking in English). You can explain your situation and ask her to be your guide and show you the campus. If the young lady cannot show you around at that particular moment ask her when it would be possible. You just might get an affirmative answer. If you do, be sure to exchange contact information to set up a time for you to continue with your potential relationship.

CHIVALRY IS NOT DEAD

Just being a foreigner who is from a western country will draw attention to you, but being “always the gentleman” will garner you a lot of points. Always try to put your best foot forward when trying to attract a woman. For example, when stepping off a bus, offer your hand to the young lady as she steps down!

Check the weather often to see if it is going to rain. If the possibility exists, carry an umbrella with you and by the off-chance that it does rain, you are prepared to extend shelter to some pretty young thing caught without protection from the weather. If she refuses to take shelter from your offer, what have you lost? , nothing, but if she accepts now you have an opening to pursue matters.

RESTAURANTS-BARS

Just like in most western countries, bars and nightclubs are still great places to meet the opposite sex.

What is interesting, in Russia, is that most restaurants switch from dining to nightclubs during the later part of the evening. A good chose of a restaurant is one that has dancing in the later hours.

And, just like at most nightclubs, asking someone to dance is always and open door to getting to know someone. Many Russian women love to go to these restaurant/bars to dance and meet men and just to have fun.

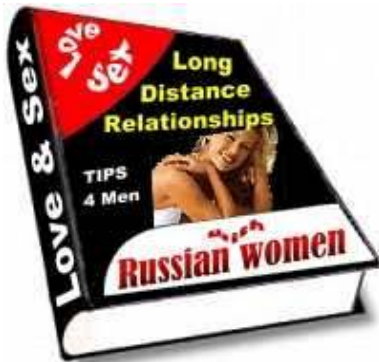

I hope these suggestions will advance your chances of approaching and picking up Russian women.

P.S. If you want a more in-depth understanding of the Russian woman, her mind-set, her reasoning her actions, especially if your desire is to find a Russian woman to be your new life partner, I have written the following books that lay out in great detail almost everything you would need to know to have a successful relationship

I'm a retired psychologist/therapist. Rarely, in my 57 y.o. have I read something so informative yet so entertaining in so short of time span without any boring technical jargon. It was truly worth every penny. Pure 100% common sense that reaffirmed my own philosophy on how to approach all the delicate issues involved. It provided a much needed supportive opinion that is very difficult to find in other reading. Cordially, Allen P.
